The Wisconsin Borgia.

St. PAUL, MINN., September 7.—One of the most sickening cases of crime and horror that the modern journalist has ever had occasion to record has just been developed in the neighboring State of Wisconsin, a case sufficient in all its horrible details to almost cause the human mind to believe that Satan takes mortal form in which to work out his superhuman iniquities. A short time since a telegram to the Inter-Ocean announced that a Mrs. Charlotte Lamb, of Triebelle, Wis., had been arrested on suspicion of murdering her husband, and now a further development of facts brings to light the moral certainty that this fiend in female form is not only guilty of that act but that she also killed her two children and two neighbors, and possibly two others. This sickening record of possible and certain crime dates as far back as the year 1854, at which time a former wife of Mr. Lamb died, and within a year afterward a lady to whom he was paying attention, both in a sudden and mysterious manner. The present Mrs. Lamb was at that time an inmate of his family, and these latter developments have aroused the suspicion that these unfortunate persons also were victims to her malignancy. The record of the last two years is a follows. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb have been living on a farm at Triebelle since 1866, in a neighborhood of devoted Christians, of which society Mrs. Lamb was apparently a faithful and efficient member, and it is owing to this fact that suspicion, which might otherwise have been openly expressed against her has been allayed. For eighteen months previous to September, 1871, the husband and wife had been living in a more or less open declared state of feud, owing to the refusal of the husband to deed the property over to her, declaring that she should have her thirds and the children the rest in case of his demise. On the 18th of September 1871, Mr. Lamb was taken with a singular malady while at work in a corn-field, and died in great agony in a few moments. The death was ascribed to heart disease. Again Mrs. Lamb made unsuccessful attempts to get control of the entire farm, saying that she expected that the children would turn her out of doors when she got old. Last May the son, Orrin, a lad of 13 years, in good health, was suddenly taken sick and died in half an hour after eating a piece of bread and butter which he declared "tasted bitter." On the 24th of June the daughter, Sarah, was taken with convulsions, and died within an hour. Early this spring Mrs. Lamb became a frequent visitor at the residence of a near neighbor, Mr. James Ottman. She was not welcomed with a great deal of cordiality, but continued her visits, and was often heard to declare a great admiration for Mr. Ottman. One day after Mrs. Ottman had returned from a call at Mrs. Lamb's where she said that she had taken a glass of bitter, she was taken violently ill. A physician was summoned, and so successfully treated the malady that the lady rapidly improved. The next day Mrs. Lamb called, and was very attentive to the invalid. She prepared a slice of toast for her, and administered some of the medicine left by the physician. Mrs. Ottman was instantly taken with agonizing pains, and died in fifteen minutes. Shortly after this Mrs. Lamb was employed in the family of Royal Garland, a man living in Diamond Bluff Township. On the 15th of August Mrs. Lamb turned Garland a cup of tea at dinner. He was immediately taken with great pains, and died in awful agony within an hour. The almost unaccountable blindness of the public now fell off as by a shock, and on the 26th of the month she was arrested for causing the death of Garland. The scales once from the public eye the horrible cause of deaths caused by this wholesale murderess was discovered, and immediate investigations were commenced. Both strychnine and arsenic were found on her premises. The stomach of Garland was exhumed and examined, as were also those of Mrs. Ottman and two children, and strychnine was found in each of them. The trial of the inhuman monster will come off at Ellsworth in November next.—Cor. of the Chicago Inter Ocean.

TERrors OF THE CYCLONE.—Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who, with a party, underwent the phenomenal experience of being forty hours in a September cyclone in the northern Atlantic, gives the following description: "Dr. Talmage was a passenger on board the steamship Greece, which arrived at New York some days ago. 'Just before 10 o'clock in the evening there was a crash like the booming of a battery. The sails of the ship were torn into ribbons, and even those that were then reefed were torn into tatters. In fact it seemed as if a squall had suddenly struck the ship, but it did not require but a moment to discover that the noble craft was in a cyclone. The vessel was now every minute or so on its beam ends, and now would pitch forward, and anon the prow would pitch backward, and the vessel would seem as if it would never come up. The captain would be heard at long intervals, going ruff, puff, scarcely audibly, and then would seem to stop altogether. The steamer was going but two miles an hour. The machinery had failed three times before. If it failed for a minute now, to the bottom the ship must go. The storm reached its greatest height at one in the morning. These, which had been breaking over the ship, stole in the sky-lights, and the cabin and staterooms became about knee deep in water, with more coming. All on board, those belonging on the vessel as well as passengers, gave up the ship. It was only a matter of time, and the Greece was to go under. The stateroom passengers—500 in number—broke out into prayers, groans, struggles, shrieks, curses, indescribable. The cabin passengers were equally demonstrative. 'Human nature and temperament came out as never before. Some were calm, some seemed as if they were praying, more asking others to pray. The ship appeared more like an egg-shell than anything else, and was under the angry, lashing waters more than half the time. From 10 o'clock on Saturday evening to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, this storm and its scenes lasted with variations and aggravations, to correctly describe which pen would fail. When the storm perceptibly lessened and danger was passed fervent prayer went up to Heaven giving blessings for deliverance, and never did prayer for those at sea sound so sweet to human ears or so comforting. By Monday the ship got out of the cyclone, when it was found among other accidents seems as if it was one's finger were made in the sides of the ship."
